BREWING THE PAST, PRESENT & FUTURE OF CRAFT BEER IN ALEXANDRIA

Robert Portner (1837 - 1906) was born in Westphalia, Germany and emigrated to the United States in 1853, joining two of his brothers in New York City. He was a pioneer, inventor and founder of the Robert Portner Brewing Company, also known as the Tivoli Brewery.

Robert Portner arrived in Alexandria in 1861, and together with a partner opened a small grocery store at the beginning of the Civil War. In 1869, Robert Portner opened his flagship brewery at the intersection of Pendleton and N. Saint Asaph Streets in Alexandria. Utilizing the railroad, Portner expanded beer distribution southbound from Alexandria to Florida. It soon became the largest brewery in the Southeastern United States.

A few of Robert Portner's notable achievements include representing the City of Alexandria at Abraham Lincoln's funeral, serving as the first president of the United States Brewers' Association and inventing a "process of and apparatus for cooling air." This important invention revolutionized his brewery, as it now allowed year-round beer lagering and refrigerated transport to warmer destinations. Portner utilized his cooling invention in the summer home built in Manassas, VA - Annaburg. The 35-room mansion is the first known home to have its own air conditioning system!

Robert Portner died at Annaburg in 1906 and the brewing company was led by a few of his sons until its closure in 1916 following the passage of Prohibition in the State of Virginia. While remnants of the history are scattered throughout Old Town Alexandria, its history has remained dormant until now.

In the fall of 2012, two of Robert Portner's great-great granddaughters, Catherine & Margaret Portner, returned to Alexandria with plans to celebrate the pursuit and achievement of the American Dream by giving this rich history a new home. Please enjoy this living history by exploring items from the original brewery on display, tasting history with one of the Robert Portner Brewing Company's reconstructed beer recipes in the pre-Prohibition series or chatting with the Portner family themselves!
